Shake-Up Needed

While President Kennedy has accepted the full responsibility for the Cuban invasion blunder, it is becoming obvious that we have in important federal posts men who are not competent.

Allen Dulles, who heads the Central Intelligence Agency (CIA), is deeply involved in the decision which sent the invaders into Cuba without proper preparation and believing that the people of Cuba would revolt and help unseat Communist Dictator Castro.

It was John Foster Dulles, secretary of state under former President Eisenhower, who put our country on "the brink" of catastrophe, and it now is brother Allen of the same family who provides information which contributed to the failure of the anti-Castro forces to bring about the downfall of the Red satellite regime of a Communist disciple of Khrushchev.

There also is reason to believe that military advice was faulty.

If this is true, then our country indeed faces a shake-up almost before the Kennedy administration gets settled in Washington.

Perhaps Indiana's U.S. Sen. Homer Capehart is correct when he says after hearing testimony that he believes "they were all in this together."

Why not then hand out discharge papers to the entire staff?
